Jargon

When Grayson and Maniac talk about baseball, the old man uses several phrases that probably would not be found in most dictionaries. These phrases, “shag fungoes,” “whiff on the stopball,” and “play pepper on the outfield grass,” are a special use of words that only people who play baseball or who are very interested in the sport would probably know.

Every sport, as well as every business and profession, has its own special vocabulary. See how many of the following examples of jargon you can match up with the meanings and professions (found in parentheses).

Family Differences

Maniac learns that there is more to a family than a group of related people who are all living under the same roof. In your own group of three to five people, discuss the following situations and then write your own answers.

The differences between the Beales and McNabs are obvious. Explore the different feelings Maniac has while living with them.

The Beales

1. Mr. Beale takes Maniac back to his house when he realizes the boy has no home.
