The Hungry Gorilla

Sam was eating a sandwich in his kitchen. A hungry gorilla came in without knocking. The hungry gorilla grabbed the sandwich. He ate it with his mouth open. Then he burped.

Teach readers how to be polite. Use the gorilla as an example. Rewrite the story above. This time, correct all the things the gorilla does wrong. Write your new story.

The Polite Hungry Gorilla

A Must-Read!

You own a bookstore. You want to sell lots of books. To sell more books, you put up a sign. The sign makes the book sound exciting.

Escape by a Hair!

Read how three little pigs were almost eaten by a big, bad wolf!

Think of a book, story, or nursery rhyme you have read. Write a sign about the story that makes people want to buy the book. Your sign should have a title and at least one sentence.

Read these tongue twisters. What beginning letter sound do you hear the most in each one?

Super silly Sally sells seashells at the sandy seashore.

Letter sound: _____

Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers. If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers, where's the peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked?

Letter sound: _____

Tongue twisters are fun to hear and say. They can be hard to say. They can make you feel like your tongue is getting all twisted up!

Write a sentence that is fun to hear and say. You can write about something real or make something up. Try to make as many words have the same beginning letter sound as you can.

Be ready to read your sentence out loud. Is it fun to say?

Raining Ice Cream

Imaginary weather can be very strange! Pretend that it is raining ice cream! Is that good or bad? What might happen?

Write a dialogue in which you and someone else talk about ice-cream rain.
